- Kelly Ingram Park. This park serves as the gateway to the Civil Rights District and is designated as "a place of Revolution and Reconciliation." This was the starting point of many civil rights demonstrations. View various sculptures and statues, including the Freedom Walk sculptures and a statue of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

- Sixteenth Street Baptist Church. Sixteenth Street Baptist holds a significant place not only in Alabama history, but also in US history. The church suffered the deadliest moment in the history of the civil rights era, with the bombing of the church in September 1963, killing four girls and galvanizing the Civil Rights Movement. It served as a meeting and rallying place for leaders and participants in the Movement.

- Alabama Jazz Hall of Fame at the Carver Theater. From the boogie-woogie beginnings of Clarence "Pinetop" Smith to the velvet crooning of Nat King Cole, legendary jazz greats are immortalized in the Alabama Jazz Hall of Fame within the historic Carver Theatre. Interactive exhibits convey the accomplishments of the likes of Duke Ellington, Lionel Hampton and Erskine Hawkins all with Alabama ties. The Carver Theatre was prominent among a half dozen theatres that catered to black patrons during segregation to enjoy movies and live entertainment.

- Birmingham Museum of Art - The Birmingham Museum of Art has one of the finest collections in the Southeast. More than 24,000 objects represent a rich panorama of cultures, including Asian, European, American, African, Pre-Columbian and Native American. Highlights include the museum's collection of Asian art, considered the finest and most comprehensive in the Southeast and the museum's world-renowned collection of Wedgwood, the largest outside of England.

- Arlington Antebellum Home & Garden - Built between 1845 and 1850 in the Greek Revival style, Arlington predates the founding of Birmingham in 1871. The city's only antebellum home, the mansion is fully restored and contains a fine collection of antiques and decorative arts including 19th century furniture, textiles, silver and paintings. During the Civil War, Arlington Antebellum home was spared from destruction when Union troops used the home as headquarters while they planned the burning of the University of Alabama.

- Fourth Avenue Business District - The neighborhood along Fourth Avenue from 15th to 18th Streets North developed as the city's black business district in the early part of the 1900s. Forced out by Jim Crow segregation and white-owned stores that did not welcome them as customers, African-American businessmen established their own retail, social and cultural center here. Black-owned banks, mortuaries, movie theaters and nightclubs flourished along the corridor through the 1960s. Some continue to this day.

Birmingham has so much to offer. Why not stay longer?
Here are some suggestions:

- ❖ Alabama Adventure Water & Theme Park - Part water playground, part amusement park, Alabama Adventure is the State's largest theme park. Roller coaster enthusiasts around the country hail the park's Rampage as one of the top wooden coaster rides anywhere. Visitors cool down in the Wave Pool and on daring water slides or relax as they cruise the Lazy River.

- ❖ Birmingham Zoo - Birmingham Zoo is an ever-evolving adventure; visitors come to see shows such as the Rhino Encounter, the Giraffe Feedings, the Lorikeet Aviary, the Predator Zone and the Sea Lion Splash Show. The zoo is blazing new trails in elephant conservation with the opening of Trails of Africa - the initiative designates the Birmingham Zoo as a national leader in the care and conservation of threatened elephants.

- ❖ DeSoto Caverns Park - One of the most beautiful, and historic show caves in the U.S. Features an awesome sound, light & water show in the Great Onyx Cathedral, larger than a football field, higher than a 12-story building and full of onyx stalagmite and stalactite formations.

- ❖ McWane Science Center - Four floors of hands-on exhibits and an IMAX Dome Theatre are all part of the fun of learning at McWane Science Center. Celebrating science and discovery, the exhibits include everything from dinosaurs to space travel.
